FAITH, NOT REASON, SAVES.

SO SAYS MR. MOODY, THE EVANGELIST,

A LARGE AUDIENCE HEARS HIM WITH ENTENSE

INTEREST.

In accordance with many requests Mr. Moody continued his sermon on "Regeneration and the Third Chapter of John' in the Church of the Holy Trinity, at Madison-ave, and Forty-second-st., yesterday morning. The congregation, which completely filled the church, was much larger even than usual. No sermon which Mr. Moody has preached since he began his evangelistic work in this city has been listened to with more intense interest. It was interspersed with many affecting stories and striking descriptions of touching scenes which Mr. Moody had witnessed during his career. At its close there were few dry eyes in the large house, and when Moody requested those persons to rise who desired the prayers of the congregation, almost 100 people stood up. The after-meeting, which was people stood up. The after meeting, which was held in the chapel of the church, was attended by almost half of the great congregation, and for half an hour longer Mr. Moody gave counsel and advice to the seekers after salvation.

"We are to be partakers of the Divine nature," said the evangelist after the introductory music, which yesterday was also unusually excellent. The matural man, he added, did not love spiritual things. When he was born again it was different, and he began to think of other things. How could one be born again? Nicodemus had asked that question. Nicodemus had known of the lifting up of the serpent in the wilderness, and Christ had recalled that incident to him. That was a way of Christ. God was continually teaching object lessons to His people all through the early ages. The brazen serpent on the poke in the wilderness had had great significance. The men bitten by the fiery serpents who had looked upon it in faith had been cured. It had a command from God. No man could be saved unless he obeyed the voice of God. That, too, had been proven in the wilderness. God had provided a remedy for every bitten Israelife. It had only been necessary to look upon the pole and be healed. To look was all that was necessary for us. We did not The wilderness. God had provided a remedy for every bitten Israelife. It had only been necessary to look upon the pole and be healed. To look was all that was necessary for us. We did not need to be graduates of theological seminaries, or even of colleges, to learn how to look. It was only neces of coneges, to learn now to look. It was only necessary to raise the eyes toward Heaven. That was God's remedy, and that would save every sinner. It was folly to begin to discuss the philosophy of religion. God was above reason. There were many things in this life which we could not reason out.

"Who can reason out death?" asked Mr. Moody.
"Who can tell why we should not live longer! Who can reason out the mysteries of the heavens, of astronomy, or of this earth? Who can reason out just things grow! Who can reason out the laws of our body? No, my friends, there are many things in this natural world which cannot be explained by reasoning. And when a man tries to reason out God this natural world which cannot be explained by reasoning. And when a man tries to reason out God and the things of lieaven he has more than he can do." Charles Spurgeon, added Mr. Moody, had said that he had been converted by looking at the right time. "But some say," he continued. "that people are made differently and constituted differently. 'I am so constituted that I can't believe,' is a common saying. College bred men often say that they are taught to believe only what they can reason out. They call it nonsense to do anything else. They declare it untrue to their reason, and they ask why God has given them reason if not for use. Yes, some men in old israel thought the same, and they were lost because they did not accept this offered remedy. Salvation is as free as the air we hreathe, but, my friends, it cost God the life of His only and dearly beloved Son. It is because he spurns the remedy. If a man is lost, it is because he spurns the remedy. If yon want salvation, look at the cross of Calvary, Many can lestify to that. Five hundred people in this audience tan tell you it is the true way."

Mr. Moody also preached in the Collegiate Church at Twenty-ninth-st. and Fifth-ave. In the afternoon, and in the Rev. Dr. Thompson's church, at Madisonave, and Eighty-third-st., in the evening. He will follow the same programme to-day.

EXCITEMENT AT A NEGRO FUNERAL.

Two wives wall over the coffin.

There was an unusual scene in the Bridge Streef African Methodist Episcopal Church in Brooklyn last Sunday when two women, each asserting that she was the widow of two women, each asserting that she was the widow of Townsend Seymour Brewster, came forward to take a last look at the body of their husband. The dead man was for many years a waiter at Close's restaurant in Duanest, this city, and lived at No. 3 Prince Court, Brooklyn. He was matried nine months ago to Miss Sarah E. E-rea, who had lived with him ever since. She says she never had any idea of the existence of another wife until the préacher announced the fact and offered each of the widows such conselution as he could. The woman who claimed precedence became hysterical in her lamentation and created great excitement. The funeral finally proceeded in an orderly manner, however, and the body was buried at the cemetery of the Evergreens.

Both Brewster and his latest wife were membars of the age. He then moved to Brooklyn, saying he had a wild life and wanted to get away from his old woman, but he was never married to the latter. The daughter, who is now about fifteen years old, was at the funeral. Brewster was a soldier during the war and was

A JUSTICE TO COMPLAIN AGAINST A LAWYER.

August P. Wagener, who was asked by Judge Mc-Adam last week to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt for alleged misconduct in a breach of promise cuse, is again in trouble. It ap-pears that on February 3 last Anna Schalble, of No. 128 Delancey-st., caused the arrest of her husband, David, for abendonment. At the Essex Market Police Court Justice Taintor held the husband, fixing the amount of ball at $208. A londsman appeared to bail the husband, and as the clerks were busy at the time, Mr. Wagener drew the bond himself. In doing so, he placed the amount of ball on the bond as $416, amount of bail was illegally high. Judge Patterson decided in his favor, and discharged the husband. It is alleged that in causing his client's release, through his own mistake, Mr. Wagener has been guilty of contempt of court, and Justice Kilbreth will report his conduct to the General Term of the Supreme Court, with a view to having him disbarred.

Mr. Wagener appeared at the Essex Market Police Court yesterday. He denied that he had obtained the release of his client on the ground stated. He said release of his client on the ground stated. He said that the point he raised before Judge Patterson was that the clerk of the Essex Market Police Court had failed to file the notice of the conviction in the County Clerk's office. Jeremiah Hayes, the clerk, insisted that he had filed the notice. An adjournment was taken until to-day to give the lawyer an opportunity to produce proof that the record of the conviction had not been filed.

J. F. HYDE, THE SLAYER OF W. TURNBULL, EX-ONERATED BY A CORONER'S JURY.

Coroner Levy and a jury yesterday finished the inquest in the case of William Turnbull, a ticket speculator, who was fatally shot in the abdomen in front of the Fourteenth Street Theatre, Saturday night, by James F. Hyde, another speculator. Mr. Howe represented the accused, and David M. Newberger was present in behalf of the relatives of the deceased. Assistant District-Attorney Grosse was also present. The principal testimony was that given by Andrew Steele, the janiter of the theatre. He saw the men Siecle, the janiter of the theatre. He saw the men-cinch, and said that when Turnbull received the wound, he stood directly behind Hyde, holding him with both hands, so as to pinion his arms. Hyde held the pistol in his right hand, and it was while he held in this manner that he made a movement of the hand, which turned the revolver against Turn bull's body. The next instant the shot was fired. Steele was positive of the correctness of his testimony about the position of the men when the revolver was

THE SLAYER OF JOHN H. ATKINSON, THE LAW

YER, HELD WITHOUT BAIL. Phoenix P. Palmer, charged with causing the death of John II. Atkinson, a lawyer, by assaulting him during an altercation in Atkinson's office, at Fiftyfifth-st. and Broadway, on Wednesday evening, was arraigned before Justice O'Reilly, at the Yorkville Police Court yesterday. The prisoner, who is a safemover, thirty-three years old, and lives at No. 197 Bleecker-st., is a man of small stature. The affidavits of Granville E. Martin, a stenographer, of No. 407 West Fifty-seventh-st., and of Franklin R. Bernard, a lawyer, were taken.

Mr. Martin testified as follows: "I heard Palmer and Atkinson engaged in a quarrel in the office, and heard Palmer say, with an oath, 'I will take the safe, Atkinson mildly replied, 'You cannot remove the safe.' At the same time Atkinson stood between Palmer and the safe. Palmer had a cart-rung in his hand, and he said: 'Get out of the way, or I'll knock your brains out.' Atkinson refused to move and Palmer struck him on the head with the cart-rung. Atkinson fell senseless to the floor, and I went out and called Police man Downey, who arrested Palmer."

Mr. Bernard's affidavit was as follows: "Palm came into our office with two other men and said he had come to remove the safe. I said, 'I have a lot of property in the safe and have not time to remove it.' Paimer replied, 'I don't care, I am going to take it.' I said, 'I will go for an officer,' whereupon Paimer struck me a blow in the face with his nst. THE ORIGIN OF IDEAS.

HOW "THE WIFE" WAS WRITTEN.

MR. BELASCO, THE PLAYWRIGHT, ENTERTAINS

THE COURT WITH SELECTIONS. Part II of the Supreme Court, over which Judge Beach presided yesterday, was crowded with a much more intelligent audience than usually gathers there, and the theme which they heard discussed was the "Origin of Ideas." Not ideas in general but the particular ones contained in the play "The Wife," and whether or not they were similar to the ones in a play written by Miss Fannie A. Mathews, called " Wash ngton Life." Miss Mathews gave her play to Daniel Frohman to read and she now alleges that "The Wife" contains many of her ideas as expressed in "Washington Life," and she has sued Mr. and David Belasco and Henry C. De Mille, the authors of the play, for the alleged surreptitions use of her ideas. Mr. De Mille finished his testimony during the morning session of the court and then Mr. Belasco was called to the witness stand.

In answer to the questions of his counsel Mr. Belasco gave an interesting description of the methods used in writing the play "The Wife." He also read parts of other plays, the effect on the audience being such that His Honor had to rap several times for order. Mr. Belasco said that the main idea of the play, that of having two men in love with one woman and having a second woman for a "villain," had suggested itself to him from reading a story in a weekly paper some years ago. He wrote the first act of a play in which there was such a situation and took it to Mr. De Mille. suggesting to the latter that they might write a play with that idea as the central one. Mr. De Mille went away with a company which he was managing and he saw him again in Philadelphia nearly a year afterward. Then the subject was resumed and a few weeks after that Mr. De Mille's company was in Williamsburg and he used to go over there at 10:30 each evening and after the play was over he and Mr. De Mille would work on their new idea from 11 p. m. until 4 a. m. All this work came to naught, however, and no real progress was made with it until they went to Mr. De Mille's home at Echo Lake, and there they stayed until the play was finished in July or August

"Every act," he said, "was re-written seven eight times. The work of the day was read to Mrs. De Mille each evening. Sometimes she would say it was very, very good, and at other times she would say it was very, very bad. If she said it was very, very good, we let it remain as it was, and if she said it was very, very had, we considered her suggestions." Mr. Belasco said that after the play was produced they felt blue, as it seemed to drag. Bronson Howard had suggested that the plot was too long in unfolding. and they then condensed the first two acts into one He remembered several plays in which there were sentences and situations similar to portions of the play high were read by Mr. Townsend from Miss Mathews's scheme, and he, in conjunction with Froissor P. de P. child and came to me with freshly gathered flowers."

Ricketts and President Low, has submitted a plan to This was from a play called "The Old Love and the New," which was produced, Mr. Belasco said, at the Madison Square Theatre with Mrs. James Brown Pot ter in the leading role. He declared on the direct and cross examinations that he had never heard of Miss Mathews's play nor of Miss Mathews until this suit segun.

the fact that she loved another man was entirely original.

Was not that according to the teachings of Christianity? Was it not natural? asked Mr. Townsend. A. -Well, yes, usually, but not on the stage, thaughter.

The witness was then asked if he had not been charged several those with incorporating ideas from other plays into these allegations.

Mrs. Sarah E. Mathews then took the witness stand and testined to having seen her daughter, the plaintid, write the play - Washington Life.

Mrs. De Mille next testined about the work of her husband and Mr. Belasco on the play while they were at Echo Lake, she declared that much of the play was founded on conversation at the dimensional hand the task of the children, she asserted that the play was washington Life. Indinever been mentioned there. This closed the case as far as the testimony went, and the compact have until April 24 to hand in briefs and proposed findings.
